

Elizabeth Anne did not attend the Kaibeto Indian School but instead stayed with her aunt Zada in Winslow, Arizona, attending school there or in nearby Leupp. She went home to Kaibeto during school holidays and summer vacations. Here is one letter she received from her parents that gives an idea of the “normal” challenges they dealt with routinely. Here is the news sent to her on September 25, 1952 via a 3 cent United States postage stamp:

Dear Anne...The sheep are coming in awful slow this year. We have been buying two weeks now and we are only about half finished according to the count. The roads are all washed out in all directions which has something to do with it. We went three full days without any cars getting into the store. I've been just about down with my back for two weeks and your mother isn't so hot either but guess we will make it somehow. And that's about all for this time...Parents

The day are coming in awful slow this year. We have been buying two weeks now

^{and} we are only about half finished according to the Count. The roads are all washed out in all directions which has something to do with it.
We went three full days without any cars getting into the store. His been just about down with my back for 2 weeks and you make it so that either but guess we will make it some how and that's about all for this time. Read your letter today, Harry De Jolly has been here and gone. None of his folks were at home
With Love. Parents
